DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1, 2, 16, and 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 6,502,125 B1 to Kenner et al. (“Kenner”).

As to claim 1, see e.g., figure 1 of Kenner where sending a search request to determine which nodes in a network have content for a requesting node is the request for delivery sites sent from the user terminal 12 to the MSP 32. The network in figure 1 has a plurality of nodes, e.g., MSP 32 and delivery sites 26, 28, and 30. Receiving a response to said search request from each of one or more response nodes having said content is the response sent back from the MSP containing the delivery site information in the delivery site file, see e.g., column 8, lines 25-39. Determining from said response which of said responding nodes are a desired set of nodes to download said content from is taught when the configuration utility 34 makes a determining of which delivery sites 26, 28, and 30 to use. Downloading said content from said desired set of nodes and storing said downloaded content onto said requesting node is taught when the user 12 receives the information from the delivery sites 26, 28, and 30, see e.g., column 14, lines 5-8.

Art Unit: 2663

As to claim 2, the file is downloaded from a distribution site where the file comprises blocks as is known in the art.

As to claim 16, see similar rejection to claim 1.

As to claim 17, see similar rejection to claim 2.

3. Claims 1, 2, 9, 10-17, 24-30, and 37-41 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent Application Pub 2002/00404479 A1 to Ehrman et al. ("Ehrman").

As to claim 1, see e.g., figure 1 of Ehrman where sending a search request to determine which nodes in a network have content for a requesting node is the request for content sent from the receiving peer 12 to the streaming content manager 14. The network in figure 1 has a plurality of nodes, e.g., receiving content manger 14 and supplying peers 10. Receiving a response to said search request from each of one or more response nodes having said content is the response sent back from the authorized suppliers, see e.g., page 2, paragraph 0023. Determining from said response which of said responding nodes are a desired set of nodes to download said content from is taught since if congestion occurs another supplying peer 10 can be selected, see e.g., page 2, paragraph 0036. Downloading said content from said desired set of nodes and storing said downloaded content onto said requesting node is taught when the receiving peer 12 receives the information from the supplying peers 10, see e.g., column 14, lines 5-8.

As to claim 2, the stream content manager is responsible for splitting up a stream, see e.g., figures 2a and 2b.

As to claim 9, performance characteristics could be the additional information supplied with each stream, see e.g., paragraph 0028 on page 2.

As to claim 10, overlapping content servers are taught as redundant supplying peers, see e.g., page 2, paragraph 0036.

As to claims 11 and 13, if a stream chunk is not received in time then latency is perceived in the network and adjustments are made based on the detected network congestion, see e.g., paragraph 0028 on page 2.

As to claim 12, since the streams are sent using different supplying peers, the streams are sent in parallel.

As to claim 14, see similar rejection to claim 1. In addition, a threshold level of latency is based on whether the block is received or not. If the block is not received in time then another supplying peer is selected thus meeting the additional claim limitation. In addition, further performance characteristics could be the additional information supplied with each stream, see e.g., paragraph 0028 on page 2.

As to claim 15, see similar rejection to claim 14. In addition, since the streams are sent using different supplying peers, the streams are sent in parallel.

As to claim 16, see similar rejection to claim 1.

As to claim 17, see similar rejection to claim 2.

As to claim 24, see similar rejection to claim 9.

As to claim 25, see similar rejection to claim 10.

As to claim 26, see similar rejection to claim 11.

As to claim 27, see similar rejection to claim 12.

As to claim 28, see similar rejection to claim 13.

Art Unit: 2663

As to claim 29, see similar rejection to claim 1. In particular, note that the server is the streaming content manager 14 and the requesting node is the receiving peer 12.

As to claim 30, see similar rejection to claim 2.

As to claim 37, see similar rejection to claim 9.

As to claim 38, see similar rejection to claim 10.

As to claim 39, see similar rejection to claim 11.

As to claim 40, see similar rejection to claim 12.

As to claim 41, see similar rejection to claim 13.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 3-8, 18-23, and 31-36 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
